

Ben Humphries, Architect, Architype, UK

Ben is a senior architect with leading sustainable design practice, Architype, where he has been involved in numerous education and community projects since he joined in 2000. These include an award winning City Learning Centre for the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea, Effra Early Years Centre in Brixton and an innovative design for a new junior wing at the celebrated Eveline Lowe Primary School, Southwark.

He is currently Project Architect for a Children's Centre Plus for the London Borough of Croydon and a complex refurbishment for Southwark Council involving the transformation of an old Victorian library into a state-of-the-art creative media training centre.

Ben lectures at a variety of universities on how to select materials using environmental criteria and has recently given talks on Architype's environmental approach at sustainability conferences in London and Toronto.
