Sue Innes, Director of Sustainability, Constructing Excellence, UK

Sue originally studied architecture, and later returned as a mature student to study environmental science. She worked for the Environment Agency for a number of years, until a secondment to work with the Movement for Innovation which was followed by permanent employment with Constructing Excellence.

Sue spends a substantial part of her time working on strategic sustainable construction issues. However, she also recognises the importance of providing practical support and training for the industry as well as developing theory and strategy and has been involved in developing and delivering a wide range of tools, training and guidance material.
