

Raymond Nyer, Consultant, France

Raymond NYER is a consultant in Executive management and assists large companies management teams in Europe in the areas of Sustainable Business Performance and Development including Quality ,Environment , Health & Safety ,CSR and Sustainable Development.

He started his career at the French Atomic Energy Commission (CEA) and spent more than 30 years with IBM where he held executive management and functional positions in France , USA and Japan in the development and manufacturing divisions and in the Corporate Headquarters .He has been the Quality Director for IBM Europe and finally the Director of Quality and Environmental Affairs of IBM Europe, Middle East, Africa.

Raymond Nyer is also currently Professor of Environment and Sustainable Development at several Engineering and Business Schools in France .He is part of the education advisory committees of these schools. As a former member of The Conference Board Europe he continues to provide advices to the European Council on Managing the Environment and Product Stewardship. He is a partner of the ECOLIFE European Commission project and a member of the Industry Association Consultative meeting of the UNEP.

Raymond Nyer is a graduate engineer from Ecole Centrale de Paris. He holds a Master of Sciences from the University of Berkeley (USA), a postgraduate degree from INSTN (Institute of Nuclear Sciences and Techniques - France) and he is a graduate from INSEAD (IEDP).