

Dr Justus von Geibler, Project Coordinator, Wuppertal Institute, Germany

Justus von Geibler works at the Wuppertal Institute within the research group "sustainable production and consumption" as a project co-ordinator. He studied forest sciences and environmental management and policy in Germany, South Africa and Sweden. Dr. Phil. at the Ruhr-University-Bochum in economic geography. In 1997, he worked as public relations assistant for waste management in a governmental administration. From 1997 to 1999 he was a research and teaching assistant at the Faculty of Forestry of the Göttingen University. Since October 2000 he is working at the Wuppertal Institute, first in the Eco-efficiency and Sustainable Enterprise Group and since 2003 in the Sustainable Production and Consumption Department.

Areas of work are the following: Sustainability indicators and reporting at corporate and sectoral level; Sustainable innovation; Governance structures for sustainable production and consumption; stakeholder dialogues and communication in global product chains; Life-cycle wide sustainability assessment of emerging technologies such as information and communication technologies and biotechnology.